XXII. CIRO PRIORE, MARTINA RUSSO DOMITIO DELIVEROO

Between Naples and Rome there is the biggest movie studio in the world. Fifty kms in which extremely different conditions, adjacent but not contaminating each other, ideal to re-create movie sets, movie stages and backlots occur: driving across the Città Domizia is like cruising through tv channels, like getting through several walls and fences that are chasing each other without contaminating each other. These are the hangars of the daily movie stages, the barricades of the en plein air sets. Within them, a kaleidoscope of architectural conditions takes place: villas, restaurants, seaside resorts, motels, drug dealing spots and connection houses. The porphyry of a former beach cottage makes room for the new Corinthian columns of the Pentecostal church that has become.

The fragmented Città Domizia is the reign of ephemeral spontaneous architecture. The stonemasons supply plaster decorations as street fooders and on the road side, herds of Jesus Christs, with arms wide open, are waiting for embellishing the hall of a luxurious two-star hotel. The Città Domizia is the city of the do-it-yourself decoration. In a continuous melting pot of ornamental menus, movie sets are coexisting, choosing the mutability as their architectural principle.

The thematic schizophrenia of Città Domizia is a continuous contest between weirdness and paradoxes and, as a result, the stylistic fragmentation acknowledges spontaneous architecture as its G-spot. Domitio Studios exploits fragmentation and paradoxes to take a look inside the boxes/sets. Domitio Studios opens up the Città Domizia with a see-through device. A system made of continuous movie productions that encourages its schizophrenia by institutionalizing a decoration delivery service, an ornamental take away, Domitio Deliveroo.
